The Hector Heritage Quay is one of Nova Scotia's major cultural tourist attractions. The Quay is home to the Ship Hector, a full-sized replica of the original ship which brought the first wave of emigrants from Scotland to Nova Scotia in 1773. Relive the tale of these early settlers and the hardships they faced beginning a new life in a new land. Visit the Interpretive Centre to learn about the living conditions these hardy souls call home during almost 11 weeks at sea. Tour the Interpretive Centre. A three-story post and beam building, to learn the history of Scottish emigration.

You might be surprised to know that the Museum of Industry is not about rusting hunks of metal and complicated explanations of how things were made. Visitors connect with the stories of people just like their grandparents and parents who worked hard, faced tough times, and used tools and machines to increase the prosperity of companies, their communities, and sometimes even themselves. Take a journey through Nova Scotia's past to discover how different work and working conditions used to be, how technological advancements changed how we worked and what was made, and removed workplace hazards or created new ones.
